[Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.] MARSHALL, Va., Jan. 21 .- The weather prophet of Et Joseph, Mo., Mr. Foster, during the month of December predicted for January storms of snow and very cold weather. With us polar airs and aret o weather have prevailed to the discomfi ure of man and beast. The third beavy enow has just fallen, covering bill, val'er and the distant Bine Ridge mountains.

The new year has begun with bright prospects for Virginia; no great deal of sickness; our farmers are prosperous and the entire community rejoiced by the hope to have the debt question settled by the powers in Richmond. ers in Richmond.

The result of the crimical trial in Warren-ton and the conviction of the unhappy culpat, has proved justice still will be meted out by our Fauquier court to guilty partes, thereby ensuring security to the law abiding citizens.

I have read with much in erest "Memoirs of Governor William Smith, of Virginia," by Judge John W. Bell. This volume of 400 pages should be in the library of every out vated citizen of Virginia, presenting as it does an interesting biography of one of the most eminer t lawyers, a steemen and soldiers of our southern country. Governor Emith's eventful life presented the connecting link of the glory of the past and present con may in the sphere of the politician and undannted soldier. But more—for many of the later years of his life he sought to withstand the rule of the souls and bodies of his fellow-men by the l'quer t'affic. His reward was to apprehend, a few years before his death the Gospel plan of salvation, which he told the writer he fully ac-

In connection with such publications it may be added that others of a like kind will shortly appear; viz, "Virginia Genealcgies," by Rev. Horace E. Hayder, A. M. Wilkesbarre. Pa., containing the history of the Itading Virginia families and embellished with 12 portraits, and the "History of the Blair, Banister and Braxton Families, Bafore and After the Revolution, with a Brief Sketch of their Descendants," with 18 Unstrations.

Heflin and Dye.

Toesday evening a representative of the Virginian went into the jall to see how the criminals therein were getting on and whether there were any new developments. Heflin's mother sent him some money and from time to time he buys things to eat but cever offers his companions a morsel. The jallor carried him some apples just as we arrived and he put them in his corner. We asked Heffin why he told so many stories about the murder and he said he did not know. When asked if there was anything which remained untold he said no, that Dye did the murdering and he burnt the house. The lequacious and irrepressible Hibs here broke to and said, "I have talked with him day and night, and he never says nothing but that," Heffin said he was not going to lie again about it for anybody, that he had to hang for his part in the crime and Dye ought to hang too. Heffin says Dye killed

Mrs. Kines for talking about his daughter. When the trials were over Dye expressed greet desire it see and talk to Heflio, so they were put together, but Dye had nothing thesy to him except when his daughter or some one eise was talking to Heflio. Heflin told Dyo that he (Dye) knew that he (Dye) was guilty. Heflin acknowledged that he was comforted by his talks and prayer with Rev. Mr. Robertson. Heflin is apparently resigned to his fate, expects death, and cares about little else tran eaton speaking terms with H. flin soon after they had been together, so Mr. Pattle thought it best to separate them. He call-Dre occupies a cell below. He was not ed the writer by name and remembered a visit once paid to the McMillan place. He thinks his main chance of escape is to have Heflin make ano har confession. He protested his innecence

His daughter Resens, who is now look t d in Washingt n and about whom there has been so much talk, has been to see her father twice. We understind she urged him to confessif he was guilty, and it was in her presence that he told Heffin that the latter was swearing his (Dye'r) life away. When asked how he thought it possible to get Haff n to make another confession he said, "Talk it out of him."
